A critical element of professional policing is ensuring the response to resistance we use is appropriate, legal, within policy, reviewed for improvement and enhanced training and supervised. Below is an abbreviated summary of the instances of our response to resistance to arrest:

Officers responded to a local business following reports of a subject carrying a metal pole and attempting to strike other patrons. Upon arrival, officers quickly identified the individual and placed him in handcuffs to prevent further escalation. The subject was visibly agitated, yelling, and physically resisting efforts to conduct a search. In response, officers used controlled physical positioning by pinning him against a wall to limit his movement and ensure safety. When the subject attempted to spit at one of the officers, they brought him to the ground to maintain control. A search was conducted, revealing no contraband. The subject was then secured in a patrol vehicle and transported to the station. He was later charged with Aggravated Resisting, Aggravated Assault, and Disorderly Conduct.

Officers identified a subject with an active felony warrant who was staying at a local hotel. Upon observing the subject exit the business and enter the parking lot, officers made contact and informed him he was under arrest based on the warrant. As officers attempted to take him into custody, the subject pulled away and fled on foot. Officers quickly pursued and brought him to the ground to prevent escape. Despite being on the ground, the subject resisted efforts to be handcuffed by refusing to place his hands behind his back. An assisting officer drew his department-issued Taser and issued a clear verbal warning regarding its potential use if the subject failed to comply. The subject then complied and was taken into custody without further incident. A subsequent search revealed the subject was in possession of a controlled substance. In addition to the outstanding warrant, he was charged with Resisting a Peace Officer and Possession of a Controlled Substance.

Officers responded to a report of a domestic battery in progress at a local business. Upon arrival, they observed an individual matching the description of one of the involved parties approaching a vehicle and entering the front passenger seat. Due to the unknown nature of the subject’s intentions—particularly the potential risk of retrieving a weapon—officers drew their department-issued Tasers and issued verbal commands for the subject to exit the vehicle. The subject complied without incident and was detained for further investigation. It was later determined that the individual was the victim of the domestic battery, and that the offender had already fled the scene prior to officers’ arrival.

A neighboring agency requested mutual aid assistance during a public community event in their city, citing the need for additional support with crowd control due to multiple physical altercations. Responding officers arrived and observed a large group of individuals actively engaged in a fight. In an effort to safely disperse the crowd and prevent further violence, officers deployed department-issued pepper ball launchers, aiming at the ground and nearby walls to create a deterrent without direct impact to individuals. The deployment was effective, and the group quickly dispersed on foot. No injuries were reported as a result of the incident.
